In June 1955, six Czech specialists visited East Germany and inspected the testing office of the Deutsche Amt fuer Material- und Warenpruefung (German Office for the Testing of Materials and Goods) (DAMW) in order to study methods employed there. Two members of the commission came from the Office of Standards in Prague and four members came from the testing office of the Ministry of Engineering in Prague. It is intended to establish in Czechoslovakia a testing office corresponding to the DAMW. The Czech commission was under the lead of one Benda (fnu).
